Geranium

‘Johnson's Blue’

Extremely long blooming (4 weeks or more) - large vivid periwinkle blue flowers appear continuously from late spring to fall. The finely cut, divided leaves of Geranium ‘Johnson's Blue’ turn to hues of reds and oranges during the fall adding extended seasonal interest to your garden. This mounding perennial is also a great cover for declining spring bulb foliage.

Perennial Geranium is always a favorite for its excellent mounding habit and late spring to summer bloom time. Lovely foliage complements the flowers well. Many of the flowers exhibit interesting veining. It is deer resistant and does well in containers. It will also work well as a border edger in either sun or shade.

Perennial Geranium prefers compost-enriched soil that stays moist. Snip off spent flowering stems at the base or shear tops back to new growth to stimulate re-bloom and freshen foliage. Generally does not need division but can be divided in spring or fall if desired.
